Doing More Than Its Part

With its large classes of young men students preparing for special service in the army and navy, such as clerks, accountants, stenographers, telegraphers, and its big classes of lady students training in the Civil Service Department for government positions, the Chillicothe Business College is playing no little part in winning the war. Three of its lady students are leaving this week for Washington to enter the War Department as stenographers. Aside from the satisfaction that they are rendering a much needed service at this critical time in their country's history, they are also broadening their education by the environment of our great national capital. Furthermore these positions afford a salary of $1100.00 per year for seven hours' work five and a half days each week and promise promotion to $1200.00 per year salary after three months' service. The examinations are held right in Chillicothe twice a month and the big school maintains a separate Department of Civil Service with a specialist in charge, thus giving its students the very coaching they need for these otherwise difficult examinations. 34

Miss Grace Clossen returned from a lengthy visit to relatives in Nebraska, Monday and looks much improved by her tour.
